

"Christianity, Inside and Out"

Text: 1 Thessalonians 5:16-24

Grace and peace be yours in never-ending supply from God our Father – the Giver of all good gifts – through the Messiah, our Savior, Jesus Christ. Amen.

I'm sure you've heard the expression by which someone claims to know a particular subject "inside and out." Maybe the expression made sense as it was originally used, but it certainly is used in nonsensical ways today. What, for example, does it mean to know math inside and out? Or fishing or politics? What exactly is the outside of something like math, fishing, or politics?

We are supposed to know our Bible "inside and out." We get what that means but, again, the expression really doesn't make a whole lot of sense. God wants us to know the inside of our Bibles; I'm not sure he cares how familiar we are with the outside.

The problem here is that using the expression "inside and out" as loosely as we do tends to mask those areas in life where it really does have meaning and application. A doctor, for example, can know the human body inside and out, a mechanic can know an engine inside and out, and a welder needs to know the metal his is attempting to fuse inside and out. The particular topic we examine this morning is Christianity in general and the individual Christian in particular, and there again we do find an inside and out.

This morning we will focus on the difference between justification and sanctification. One happens outside the Christian and the other happens inside. This is a critical distinction that every Christian needs to understand thoroughly. The goal of our study of God's Word this morning is to make sure each of us does have that solid understanding of the difference between justification and sanctification, and thereby to understand Christianity, inside and out. We find the basis for our study in Paul's First Letter to the Thessalonians, the Fifth Chapter:

ESV 1 Thessalonians 5:16-24 Rejoice always,¹⁷ pray without ceasing,¹⁸ in everything give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus for you.¹⁹ Do not quench the Spirit.²⁰ Do not despise prophecies.²¹ Test all things; hold fast what is good.²² Abstain from every form of evil.²³ Now may the God of peace Himself sanctify you completely; and may your whole spirit, soul, and body be preserved blameless at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.²⁴ He who calls you is faithful, who also will do it.

This is God's Word. We would do well to read and study these words as if they were a hand-written letter, addressed to us, and signed by God himself. These words are that certain and that personal. Confident then of these words, and desiring one of the very things that we study today (our sanctification) so we pray, "Sanctify us by your truth, O Lord. Your word is truth." Amen.

What do you suppose would happen if we were to simply declare every person in every prison or jail in our nation to be innocent of all charges, and then to simply release them?

We do have some Biblical backing for that sort of thing, don't we? Isn't that exactly what God did for every human being in connection with his Son? Don't we hear every Sunday how God the Father has declared the whole world of sinners not guilty, having condemned his perfect Son in their stead and as their substitute? Why then don't we apply this Biblical example in our prisons? Why not declare all convicted criminals to be not guilty, as God has so declared us? Why not set them free, as God set us free?

Clearly this would not be a particularly good idea. To suddenly release our entire prison population into society would create instant terror and chaos; it would cripple our society. A substantial percentage of those released would undoubtedly pick up where they left off when arrested. They are in prison for a reason.

But how do you know unless you try? Isn't that what God did with us? Rather than just destroy sinful mankind before we could do any more harm, God sent his Son to pay for our sins, and once he did that, he then declared the whole world's debt of sin to have been paid in full. What's the difference?

The answer is that no change will necessarily have taken place inside of each human heart. The only change that will have occurred would be outside of the prisoner, and would affect him only in that way.

The point is that this ill-advised notion of simply declaring all prisoners not guilty and then releasing even hardened criminals back into society helps us to understand the difference between justification and sanctification. It also reveals at least one of the reasons why the unbelieving world around us often regards the Christian faith as both ridiculous and, more to the point, dangerous.

Justification is a declaration by God, and therefore takes place outside of the human being. That's not to say that God's actions in justification have no effect on man. We are, after all, the ones being declared innocent of sin. Justification nevertheless remains true even if the whole world were to reject it as false. In other words, the fact that man rejects God's proclamation of forgiveness does not make that proclamation false. That declaration, again, takes place outside of man and stands as true whether we believe it or not.

Justification is therefore the single most comforting and reassuring truth revealed to us in God's Word. The fact that God's declaration of sins forgiven takes place outside of us, and exists as an accomplished fact whether we believe it or not, removes you, me, and every other human being from the equation. God's declaration remains true and valid no matter what I do and no matter how I feel about it. It remains true even if every human being rejects it as false. The comfort then is that, according to God's own proclamation, my sins cannot now condemn me. The only thing that can condemn me is my rejection of Jesus and his sin payment, which is unbelief. In other words, how I feel about Jesus can never cancel what he did for me. The fact that justification happened outside of me, and is therefore in no way affected by how I think or feel, provides a most unique confidence and comfort.

Yet God's pronouncement that the debt for all sin has been paid by Jesus does not, in and of itself, necessarily change anything within the human being. In fact if Christianity were only what the godless think it is, such a religion would make the wholesale release of murderous prisoners look tame in comparison. Imagine a church or religion made up of human beings who continue to give themselves over to every imaginable sin and depravity, but who nonetheless still believe that they have God's assurance that every one of those sins is forgiven. The result would be rampant chaos and anarchy.

Yet understand that this is exactly how much of the world regards the Christian faith. They hear of sins forgiven and of a debt paid in full by another, and they project onto Christians what they themselves would do in that scenario. They envision wild-eyed sociopaths on a permanent spring break – with diplomatic immunity and unlimited credit cards. What they simply cannot comprehend is the other aspect of the Christian faith that we study this morning: Sanctification, which we identify this morning as the change on the inside.

First some clarification so we have our terms straight. The Bible uses "sanctification" in what we call a wide and a narrow sense. This is not as complicated as it might sound. This morning we use the word in its most common narrow sense, where it refers to the internal transformation that the Holy Spirit works within the sinner once he has been brought to faith.

This definition is critical, in part because it is this very thing that separates the Christian from the sociopath. The world cannot fathom how individuals who have been told that another has already paid for every one of their sins, past, present, and future, would not simply run wild with such information, such implied license and immunity. They have no concept of sanctification in large part because they have never experienced it.

Sanctification is different in that it takes place within us. It follows after justification but, more than that, it is a divine action that changes man on the inside. What the Holy Spirit accomplishes in us – the moment the new man is created in us – is a change of will. Where once we knew and desired only evil continually, the new man in us wants always and only to do God's will. A moral transformation is thereby worked within every single Christian.

Non-Christians don't understand the change that is worked in man by God the Holy Spirit. The sin-debt of all has been paid, but only those who have been brought to saving faith in this promise undergo the dramatic internal change or transformation we know as sanctification. With the rebirth of the new man in us comes the loathing of sin and the desire to live in perfect harmony with God's will. While prior to conversion human beings might attempt to obey God's commands out of fear, guilt, or in an effort to earn something from God, conversion leaves us with a desire to obey. There is no fear or compulsion involved. Obedience is the natural desire of that new man within us, the desire to thank God for providing our forgiveness and life.

Our text lists some of the changes that take place – some of the desires that Christians share: "Rejoice always, pray without ceasing, in everything give thanks... Do not quench the Spirit. Do not despise prophecies. Test all things; hold fast what is good. Abstain from every form of evil." Just listen to those words, and let them form an image or picture in your mind of the kind of person who now wants to put them into practice. Does this sound like the kind of person that any society ought to fear? Does it sound like the kind of person that revels in sin because someone else agreed to suffer the punishment? Obviously not. When he brings us to faith, the Holy Spirit changes us on the inside. This isn't something we do or provide for ourselves. The Holy Spirit alone works this change in us.

Yet this then presents another question. Why does Paul even mention these things if this transformation is alone the work of the Holy Spirit within us? Why does Paul bother with such evangelical admonitions if the Holy Spirit has already worked this inner desire for righteousness in the Christian by bringing to life the new man within us? Our text answers this question in the next verse: "Now may the God of peace Himself sanctify you completely; and may your whole spirit, soul, and body be preserved blameless at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." The problem, of course, is that this inner transformation is never complete, not as long as we still have our sinful flesh. Paul prays for a total, complete sanctification for the believers in Thessalonica, but he also knows that such things cannot be fully accomplished until we are finally rid of the old Adam in heaven. So also Paul, when he wrote to the Philippians, spoke of his own life-long struggle: "Not that I have already obtained this or am already perfect, but I press on to make it my own, because Christ Jesus has made me his own. Brothers, I do not consider that I have made it my own. But one thing I do: forgetting what lies behind and straining forward to what lies ahead, I press on toward the goal for the prize of the upward call of God in Christ Jesus." (Philippians 3:12-14)

You and I hear such things, and we acknowledge that these things are true and right, but what real and practical advantage is there in knowing such truths? What, in other words, is the great advantage in learning that the Holy Spirit works to bring about a moral transformation within me if it is indeed the Holy Spirit alone who does such things?

The answer is that because we are both old man and new man we lose sight of the goal, which is perfect obedience. The Holy Spirit brings us to faith and thereby creates the desire, but it is man who is to carry out the works. "It is God who works in you both to will and to do for His good pleasure," yet it is not God "who does his good pleasure." It is you, the child of God. For that desire to be continually rekindled we need to feast regularly on Word and Sacrament. We need the power that God's Word provides to fulfill our calling and to remain singly dedicated to the work of the gospel.

Do you find yourself failing to "rejoice always"? Failing to "pray without ceasing"? Failing to "give thanks to God in everything," failing to "hold fast what is good," and failing to "abstain from every evil"? The solution, the only solution, is a greater measure of the Bread of Life – the Word of God. That's how and where God gives Christians not only the ability to believe the objective facts of justification, but also how and where we are given the power to beat our old Adam into submission and to "put on" the new man. That new man doesn't need to be coerced, instructed, or even encouraged. It just needs to be "put on" – to dominate or rule within us. The power of God's Word is what makes that happen.

Thanks be to God both for our justification and our sanctification. Meet with him regularly in his Word, and know, as we are assured in the last verse of our text, that he himself will thereby preserve you in that saving faith until he calls you home: "May your whole spirit, soul, and body be preserved blameless at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. He who calls you is faithful, who also will do it." Meet daily with God in his Word, and then know that you can trust him to do what he promised. Amen.

^{ESV} Isaiah 61:1-3, 10-11 The Spirit of the Lord GOD is upon me, because the LORD has anointed me to bring good news to the poor; he has sent me to bind up the brokenhearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to those who are bound; ² to proclaim the year of the LORD's favor, and the day of vengeance of our God; to comfort all who mourn; ³ to grant to those who mourn in Zion-- to give them a beautiful headdress instead of ashes, the oil of gladness instead of mourning, the garment of praise instead of a faint spirit; that they may be called oaks of righteousness, the planting of the LORD, that he may be glorified. ¹⁰ I will greatly rejoice in the LORD; my soul shall exult in my God, for he has clothed me with the garments of salvation; he has covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decks himself like a priest with a beautiful headdress, and as a bride adorns herself with her jewels. ¹¹ For as the earth brings forth its sprouts, and as a garden causes what is sown in it to sprout up, so the Lord GOD will cause righteousness and praise to sprout up before all the nations.

^{ESV} John 1:6-8, 19-28 There was a man sent from God, whose name was John. ⁷ He came as a witness, to bear witness about the light, that all might believe through him. ⁸ He was not the light, but came to bear witness about the light. ¹⁹ ¶ And this is the testimony of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem to ask him, "Who are you?" ²⁰ He confessed, and did not deny, but confessed, "I am not the Christ." ²¹ And they asked him, "What then? Are you Elijah?" He said, "I am not." "Are you the Prophet?" And he answered, "No." ²² So they said to him, "Who are you? We need to give an answer to those who sent us. What do you say about yourself?" ²³ He said, "I am the voice of one crying out in the wilderness, 'Make straight the way of the Lord,' as the prophet Isaiah said." ²⁴ ¶ (Now they had been sent from the Pharisees.) ²⁵ They asked him, "Then why are you baptizing, if you are neither the Christ, nor Elijah, nor the Prophet?" ²⁶ John answered them, "I baptize with water, but among you stands one you do not know, ²⁷ even he who comes after me, the strap of whose sandal I am not worthy to untie." ²⁸ These things took place in Bethany across the Jordan, where John was baptizing.

^{ESV} 1 Thessalonians 5:16-24 Rejoice always, ¹⁷ pray without ceasing, ¹⁸ give thanks in all circumstances; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus for you. ¹⁹ Do not quench the Spirit. ²⁰ Do not despise prophecies, ²¹ but test everything; hold fast what is good. ²² Abstain from every form of evil. ²³ ¶ Now may the God of peace himself sanctify you completely, and may your whole spirit and soul and body be kept blameless at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ. ²⁴ He who calls you is faithful; he will surely do it.

The Old Testament Lesson: (Isaiah 61:1-3, 10-11) When asked by John the Baptist's disciples if he was the Promised Messiah, Jesus himself answered by quoting this very prophecy as that which identifies him as the One that was promised. Just as Jesus is the fulfillment of this ancient prophecy from Isaiah, so also Jesus can and should be seen throughout the Old Testament. Jesus is the One – our only Lord and Savior.

Psalm 24 (Supplement page 25) (Brown Hymnal)

The New Testament Lesson: (John 1:6-8,19-28) The Jews of Jesus' day were big on form over substance. They demonstrate as much in our second reading by asking John the Baptist not about the substance of his teaching and baptism, but about the formal authority (or lack thereof) to do what he was doing. As the Great Forerunner of the long-promised Messiah, John pointed to the One who was coming. Our calling today is to point our neighbor to the Savior who has now come. And is coming again.

CLC News – Pastor Michael Wilke has returned calls to the dual parish of Calvary of Marquette and St. Peter's of Iron River. Pastor David Pfeiffer has returned the call to Immanuel of Mankato. Teachers Michaela Winters (Hales Corners) and Jennifer Wiese (Fond du Lac) have announced their retirement at the end of the current school year.

Voters Meeting Notes – At our Annual meeting on December 4, Keith Mantz and Brian Fettig were elected to the Church Council, and Timothy Meyer was elected to the Board of Elders. The budget for 2024 was adopted with an increase of 3.5% from 2023. $14,000 was set as St Paul's estimated CLC mission contribution for 2024. A change to Article 1 of the Bylaws of St Paul's constitution was adopted to clarify the new member acceptance procedure.

Congratulations! – God delivered to the Meyer family a healthy baby boy (Aurthur Rafael) early Wednesday morning. Aurthur is schedule to be received into God's kingdom of grace through baptism this morning.

Church Council Organization – Following the Voters Meeting, the 2024 Church Council assigned the following offices: Mick Johnson, President; Brian Fettig, Vice-President; Keith Mantz, Treasurer; Timothy Meyer, Secretary; Phil Pfennig, Financial Secretary; Mark Johnson, Trustee Coordinator.
