

"Joyful, No Matter What"

Text: Matthew 10:21-22, 26-33

Grace, mercy and peace be multiplied to you, the most blessed of all people - blessed because you both know the one true God and, even better, are known by Him. Amen.

The 19th century writer Charles Dickens began his masterpiece, A Tale of Two Cities, with these words: "It was the best of times; it was the worst of times." Scholars debate what Dickens meant by these words, but one of the best characteristics of great literature is that the reader is free to assign his own meaning or interpretation – to find his own insights. My own personal takeaway is that any given time can be either the best or the worst, and we have the power of decide which it will be.

To put the thing into modern terms, given what you've been seeing lately in the news, would you characterize our present situation as the best of times or the worst of times? The reality is that whatever you allow to occupy your thoughts – whatever you allow to draw your attention and fill your world – that is what will determine your impression of the present. If you find yourself absorbed with politics, racial tensions, riots, wars, fraud, anarchy, lies, and lawlessness, you will inevitably conclude that we are living in the worst of times. Your perception is your reality.

But then a strange thing happens when you turn off the news and drive from your mind what others are doing or saying, along with the fear of what might happen (to our country and to you personally,) and look only at the way things truly are right now in your world. In fact, take it a step further. Even in our own world we need to apply this same mindset, because in every life there is always good and bad, pleasant and unpleasant, desirable and undesirable. That means we can always find things that will demoralize and discourage us – things that, if we allow them, will fill us with fear and anxiety. Or we can trust God to be God, and dwell on the innumerable good things of the present.

No one, for example, tried to prevent us from coming here today to worship our God according to the dictates of our conscience. We have enough money not only to live, but to live well. (Visit any Third World country if you doubt that.) Our homes are filled with non-necessities, our closets with clothes, and watching our weight is more of a concern than wondering where our next meal can be found. Everyone here can see and hear. Jobs are plentiful, our city enjoys law and order, and we have families that we love and that love us. Focus on those things, and it will be difficult to come to any other conclusion than that we are living in the best of times. This should be a consistent Christian sentiment.

That's not to say, of course, that there will never be difficulties or hardships. In a world broken by sin, of course there will be. But we can live joyfully in such a world. We can live without fear and anxiety of what might happen because we have unbreakable promises from our God. With these truths in mind, we consider our text for this morning, the Holy Word of God found in Matthew's Gospel, the Tenth Chapter:

<sup>ESV</sup> Matthew 10:21-22, 26-33 Brother will deliver brother over to death, and the father his child, and children will rise against parents and have them put to death, <sup>22</sup> and you will be hated by all for my name's sake. But the one who endures to the end will be saved... <sup>26</sup> ¶ "So have no fear of them, for nothing is covered that will not be revealed, or hidden that will not be known. <sup>27</sup> What I tell you in the dark, say in the light, and what you hear whispered, proclaim on the housetops. <sup>28</sup> And do not fear those who kill the body but cannot kill the soul. Rather fear him who can destroy both soul and body in hell. <sup>29</sup> Are not two sparrows sold for a penny? And not one of them will fall to the ground apart from your Father. <sup>30</sup> But even the hairs of your head are all numbered. <sup>31</sup> Fear not, therefore; you are of more value than many sparrows. <sup>32</sup> So everyone who acknowledges me before men, I also will acknowledge before my Father who is in heaven, <sup>33</sup> but whoever denies me before men, I also will deny before my Father who is in heaven.

This is God's Word. The God who gave us these words certainly has the power to preserve all who put their trust in him. That our God would comfort and bless each of us through our study of these holy, perfect, inspired words this morning, so we pray, "Sanctify us in the truth, O Lord. Your word is truth." Amen.

Given the positive way we began, you might have found it jarring when our text began as it did. It sounds even more dire if you go back a couple more verses, where we read this: Beware of men, for they will deliver you over to courts and flog you in their synagogues, <sup>18</sup> and you will be dragged before governors and kings for my sake, to bear witness before them and the Gentiles. <sup>ESV</sup>(Matthew 10:17-18) That's part of the challenge of textual sermons – sermons based on a set of texts or portions of Scripture. Often the words appear out of context – as though we are taking our seats in the middle of a play. That doesn't mean that the words are in any way false or misleading, but the lack of context can create a challenge.

The context of our text is Jesus' sending out his apostles. He warned them that they would face hardship and persecution, but the whole point of the exercise was not only to spread the gospel, but to teach his representatives that God could be trusted to protect and provide for them. You may recall how he sent out the 12 without any provisions – no money, change of clothes, or food. He also later sent 72 others with the same orders. Do you recall their frame of mind when they returned? From Luke 10:17-20: The seventy-two returned with joy, saying, "Lord, even the demons are subject to us in your name!" <sup>18</sup> And he said to them, "I saw Satan fall like lightning from heaven." <sup>19</sup> Behold, I have given you authority to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy, and nothing shall hurt you. <sup>20</sup> Nevertheless, do not rejoice in this, that the spirits are subject to you, but rejoice that your names are written in heaven."

Every part of this dialog is important, and it goes to the heart of our study this morning. It is silly and naïve to imagine that those sent encountered no opposition, rejection, or hardship. Of course they did. But what was their frame of mind when they returned? They were filled with joy and excitement. Their minds were obviously occupied not with what went wrong, or with what was disagreeable, but with what was good and with what went right.

Still, Jesus had to guide them in their enthusiasm, didn't he? The problem was that the basis for their joy was the fact that "even the demons are subject to us in your name." While what they said was true, Jesus redirected them to something even greater: "Nevertheless, do not rejoice in this, that the spirits are subject to you, but rejoice that your names are written in heaven."

This is the base, the foundation, on which every Christian must build. Outward circumstances will always shift and change. The temporary things that give us joy or satisfaction in this life are fickle and unreliable. Not so with our ultimate goal. No changing circumstances in this life can ever be allowed to rob us of the peace and joy in knowing that our salvation has been secured for us and that heaven is our final destination.

Still, Jesus in our text teaches us that our joy can be buried under life's hardships – if we allow it. Jesus spoke the words of our text to the 12 apostles as he sent them out into the world as his witnesses. They would break no laws, hurt no one, deprive no one, say nothing untrue, and yet Jesus assured them that they would be hated: Brother will deliver brother over to death, and the father his child, and children will rise against parents and have them put to death, <sup>22</sup> and you will be hated by all for my name's sake.

That is the challenge that we confront this morning. Can we really live joyfully in a world where we can expect to be hated – even if the world of those who hate us should include those nearest and dearest to us?

Profoundly sobering question, isn't it? In fact I would suggest that if we do not find this whole topic intensely sobering and relevant, then we're probably not thinking about it clearly or honestly enough. No human being wants to be hated. No one relishes the thought of hard times or persecution. We are hard-wired with a desire to be loved and respected, and to live without discord and strife. And yet Jesus here tells us that the job description of every single Christian includes not only enduring the hatred of every single element of the unbelieving world, but actually going out and saying and doing the very things that will make that hatred a reality – at times including resistance and animosity even from the unbelievers who are closest to our hearts.

The solution is not to shirk our responsibilities as God's representatives. Jesus made that clear in our text: What I tell you in the dark, say in the light, and what you hear whispered, proclaim on the housetops. We have God-given work to do, and that work involves saying what many will not want to hear.

There are two realizations at work here in every Christian heart. The first is our innate understanding that to actually speak up and speak out would accomplish the very thing our Savior said it would: the animosity of the world around us. We all have a natural aversion to that hostility - we dread it like the plague. And yet the second realization is also at work, which is that speaking up and speaking out also accomplishes something else: human souls are rescued, saved, delivered, won. These two truths continually war within us.

Why would Jesus, the Prince of Peace, advocate such discord? Why would the very embodiment of divine love ever encourage or even compel us to be the creators of conflict? Why would he tell us, his beloved children, to do what he knows will cause discord and animosity? Three reasons. First, because he knows that that hatred already exists in the heart of every unbeliever, at times lying dormant, but always present. Second, because he knows that there is no other way to address unbelief, no other way to rescue sinners. Third, he knows that there is also a personal element in all of this. Our own souls are at risk when we struggle to blend in with the world.

Here's an example of how that works. Anecdotal evidence abounds of deep cover agents inserted into the United States by the Soviets during the Cold War. These men and women were extensively trained to speak, act, and think exactly like Americans, and to go about their lives in the United States ever ready to heed the call to action from the motherland. What happened to a significant number of them is that their acting became reality. Mentally and emotionally they became Americans, and they actually refused to obey the command of their former country when it finally came – this despite the meticulous vetting and training process where only the most dedicated and patriotic individuals were sent.

The same thing can happen to Christians. Live long enough in the world as a deep-cover actor only pretending to love the world, and that love and allegiance for the world eventually becomes our reality.

Our text spells out the advantages of the other scenario – where Christians strip off their camouflage and actually "say in the light what Christ said in the dark" and "proclaim on the housetops what we once heard whispered." The result is that God, your friend and ally, works in and through you – not only strengthening you but saving others. Our text assured us: "Even the hairs of your head are all numbered." <sup>31</sup> Fear not, therefore; you are of more value than many sparrows." The only animosity that we cannot possibly bear up under is that of our Heavenly Father. That's who Jesus was referring to when he said, "And do not fear those who kill the body but cannot kill the soul. Rather fear him who can destroy both soul and body in hell." Since only God has that power, he is the one enemy that we absolutely cannot afford.

So then what is the goal here? What is the point or purpose of Christ's words in our text? Does he say this to terrify us into compliance? Are these words recorded to frighten us so terribly that we finally do what he wants out of abject fear or dread that if we don't, we won't be saved? Or is the point to make us think that we only have his love when we are doing what he wants us to do? Obviously none of these. Our Savior in our text is instructing us on how we can have consistently joyful hearts, even while we carry out his work and will – no matter what our outward circumstances. Forgiveness and salvation are already ours – secured for us, and promised to us, by our Savior. Nothing in all creation can rob us of what our God has promised us. Whoever believes in God's Son, Jesus Christ, will be saved. This is the bedrock on which we build, and when we do, nothing can rob us of the joy that our Savior has given to us as our permanent possession.

Obviously there is discord in the world. Clearly there is opposition to God's Word and will, so there will also be opposition to all that follow and proclaim that Word and will of God. Accept these as inevitable facts, but never let them rob you of the joy of living as those whose "names are written in heaven." The One who earned your forgiveness and provided your perfection can and will preserve you until he calls you home. Amen.

ESV Exodus 19:2-8 They set out from Rephidim and came into the wilderness of Sinai, and they encamped in the wilderness. There Israel encamped before the mountain, <sup>3</sup> while Moses went up to God. The LORD called to him out of the mountain, saying, "Thus you shall say to the house of Jacob, and tell the people of Israel: <sup>4</sup> You yourselves have seen what I did to the Egyptians, and how I bore you on eagles' wings and brought you to myself. <sup>5</sup> Now therefore, if you will indeed obey my voice and keep my covenant, you shall be my treasured possession among all peoples, for all the earth is mine; <sup>6</sup> and you shall be to me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation. These are the words that you shall speak to the people of Israel." <sup>7</sup> ¶ So Moses came and called the elders of the people and set before them all these words that the LORD had commanded him. <sup>8</sup> All the people answered together and said, "All that the LORD has spoken we will do." And Moses reported the words of the people to the LORD.

ESV Romans 5:6-15 For while we were still weak, at the right time Christ died for the ungodly. <sup>7</sup> For one will scarcely die for a righteous person-- though perhaps for a good person one would dare even to die-- <sup>8</sup> but God shows his love for us in that while we were still sinners, Christ died for us. <sup>9</sup> Since, therefore, we have now been justified by his blood, much more shall we be saved by him from the wrath of God. <sup>10</sup> For if while we were enemies we were reconciled to God by the death of his Son, much more, now that we are reconciled, shall we be saved by his life. <sup>11</sup> More than that, we also rejoice in God through our Lord Jesus Christ, through whom we have now received reconciliation. <sup>12</sup> ¶ Therefore, just as sin came into the world through one man, and death through sin, and so death spread to all men because all sinned-- <sup>13</sup> for sin indeed was in the world before the law was given, but sin is not counted where there is no law. <sup>14</sup> Yet death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over those whose sinning was not like the transgression of Adam, who was a type of the one who was to come. <sup>15</sup> ¶ But the free gift is not like the trespass. For if many died through one man's trespass, much more have the grace of God and the free gift by the grace of that one man Jesus Christ abounded for many.

ESV Matthew 10:21-22, 26-33 Brother will deliver brother over to death, and the father his child, and children will rise against parents and have them put to death, <sup>22</sup> and you will be hated by all for my name's sake. But the one who endures to the end will be saved... <sup>26</sup> ¶ "So have no fear of them, for nothing is covered that will not be revealed, or hidden that will not be known. <sup>27</sup> What I tell you in the dark, say in the light, and what you hear whispered, proclaim on the housetops. <sup>28</sup> And do not fear those who kill the body but cannot kill the soul. Rather fear him who can destroy both soul and body in hell. <sup>29</sup> Are not two sparrows sold for a penny? And not one of them will fall to the ground apart from your Father. <sup>30</sup> But even the hairs of your head are all numbered. <sup>31</sup> Fear not, therefore; you are of more value than many sparrows. <sup>32</sup> So everyone who acknowledges me before men, I also will acknowledge before my Father who is in heaven, <sup>33</sup> but whoever denies me before men, I also will deny before my Father who is in heaven.

The First Lesson: (Exodus 19:2-8) Our Old Testament lesson is a rather rare example of a two-sided covenant in the Bible. Here God offered Israel national independence and prosperity on the condition that they struggle to keep His commandments and continue to honor Him as the one true God. Had Israel followed through on their side of the agreement, God would certainly have carried out His. The New Covenant is one-sided. God alone provided the payment for our sins.

The Psalm of the Day – Psalm 23 (Hymnal Page 64) (Read responsively)

The Second Lesson: (Romans 5:6-15) Though it is true that God established a two-sided covenant with the nation of Israel, that covenant did not involve the earning of heaven. The Jews, however, came to believe that they could indeed earn heaven by their "good works." Obviously they could not, as Paul so clearly teaches in our New Testament lesson.
